

CAMERON SURE OF BIG MAJORITY IN COCONINO

Phoenix Business Man Declares That Maricopa Will Also be in Line.

"You can bet your last dollar that Ralph Cameron will carry Coconino county by the largest majority of any candidate for delegate to congress since the county was formed," said S. J. Tribolet, the Phoenix butcher and stockman, to a Journal-Miner man Saturday evening as he passed through here on the train on his way home from Flagstaff. "Cameron and the republican party of the territory will be agreeably surprised at the endorsement that the republican candidate will receive in his home county."

"You can also put it in your hat," he continued, "that Phoenix will do the right thing by Cameron. He will not only carry the city, but he will receive a handsome majority in the county of Maricopa."

"Everywhere I have been north of Phoenix there is a wave of enthusiasm sweeping over the territory for Cameron. I am assured that Yavapai county is all right and am also pleased to learn that Cameron has many warm democratic friends working night and day for him in the counties of the south that have always given Smith large majorities.

"Stay with Cameron, old man, he is certain to win," he declared, with the air of one who meant every word he said, as the train pulled out.

Tribolet is one of the leading business men of Phoenix. He has big stock interests in the Salt River valley and is recognized as one of its most conservative and successful business men. He admitted last night that he has devoted very little of his time in the past to politics and said that he is a Cameron man from start to finish.

NO POLITICAL FEUDS IN PRESENT CAMPAIGN

Special to the Journal-Miner.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Neither William Howard Taft nor William Jennings Bryan is without enemies. If either were, he would hardly fit to be the nominee of a great party for the presidency. But the present campaign is not likely, as have campaigns in the past, to be determined by great personal hatreds felt for either candidate.

It is true there is in Ohio the Foraker opposition to Taft and in Pennsylvania the Guffey antagonism toward Bryan, but there is hardly a chance that either will prove a determining factor in the campaign. So far as Pennsylvania is concerned there never was the slightest chance of Bryan's carrying the Keystone state, and no matter how much Guffey and his friends may hate Bryan the spirit will not extend far beyond Pennsylvania's borders. It is impossible, of course, to tell what the Foraker sentiment in Ohio may be, but Senator Foraker himself is not actively opposing Taft, so the Taft-Foraker feud is not entitled to rank with the great political feuds of the past.

For instance, it furnishes no parallel with the great Conkling-Blaine feud of the past political generation, which resulted in Blaine's defeat for the presidency in 1884. Conkling and Blaine had hated each other for twenty years, and though Conkling had been forced out of politics before Blaine achieved the nomination he had so long coveted, the refusal of Conkling to say a word in support of the republican nominee lost Blaine enough votes to have given him New York and the presidency. It is true Conkling did not publicly advise Blaine's defeat but his remark, when requested to speak for Blaine, that he was "not engaged in criminal practice," was whispered into the ear of every worshipper of "Conkling the Magnificent," and they knifed Blaine unmercifully.

Grover Cleveland's personal quarrel with David B. Hill undoubtedly was responsible for Cleveland's defeat in 1888. Hill was a candidate that year for governor of New York and was elected, but it was charged and never seriously denied that Hill's followers had knifed Cleveland from one end of the state to the other.

One of the most noted feuds between great men, though it did not affect the result of a presidential election, was that between Grant and Charles Sumner. Memory of it rankled in Grant's heart as long as he lived, and its bitterness probably brought on the attack of heart disease which resulted in Sumner's death.

Even if the feud did not determine the results of a presidential election, it certainly left a great and lasting impress on the history of the United States. Had it not been for Sumner's enmity toward Grant the latter's project for the annexation of Santo Domingo would have been accomplished and the American republic would have entered a generation earlier than it did on its career as a colonial power. It was the bitterest hour of Grant's life when the senate, under the leadership of Sumner, rejected the annexation of Santo Domingo. Grant's fame as a military hero was secure for all time and he believed the annexation of Santo Domingo would give him lasting fame as a statesman. No matter whether we may believe today that the annexation of Santo Domingo would have been wise, there is no doubt that its failure contributed largely to Grant's disappointment with his experience as president.

Defendants' story was different. They testified that they entered the place and ordered noodles. Tom Kee refused to serve the desired dishes and struck Chapman in the face when he entered the kitchen to give his order. He admitted that he mixed things with the Chink and that in the scuffle the latter accidentally fell across the stove.

Cross examined as to why they ran away after the incident, Quinn said that it was time to run when Chinks were flocking to the place in droves, and one of them shooting in their direction.

Deputy Sheriff Burns and Night Officer McMahon testified that they were attracted to the place by the shooting. They admitted having placed under arrest a belligerent Chinese who appeared to be the principal peace disturber when they arrived. They afterwards ran after the fleeing warriors, who succeeded in escaping to Fort Whipple barracks.

Several witnesses, including the cook at Fort Whipple, were examined as to the character of the accused men, all testifying that truth, veracity, peace and quietude were their leading traits.

Acquitted of Charge Of Toasting Chink On A Stove

(From Tuesday's Daily)

Arguing on the theory that "He who sitteth on a red hot stove shall rise again," Attorney "Dick" Talbot convinced a jury yesterday afternoon in Justice of the Peace McLane's court that his clients, T. J. Chapman and Joseph Quinn, two Fort Whipple soldiers, were not guilty of attempting to cook Tom Kee, a Chinese attaché of the noodle joint, the morning of September 6 at 1:30 o'clock. The jury returned a verdict for the defendants after a few minutes deliberation. Horace Houlbe, a taird soldier, arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Burns on the charge of being implicated in the noodle joint affray, was released from custody by the court during the examination of the witnesses. There was absolutely no evidence showing that he was connected with the row in any way.

The evidence of the Oriental manufacturers of the delicious noodle and the accused soldiers was directly in variance. The testimony of Chinese witnesses examined, including the prosecuting witness Kee, showed that the soldiers were the aggressors. Kee claimed that Quinn was the man who assaulted him and another Chink testified that Chapman was the guilty one. The pigtailed enterers claimed that the soldiers entered the place and immediately started a "rough house," throwing Kee on the stove when he refused to fill a noodle order. The de-

SAD AFFLICTION OF MRS. HARTNETT OF JEROME

(From Sunday's Daily)

Accused of being insane, Mrs. Mary Hartnett of Jerome had a partial hearing in the probate court yesterday and was sent to the county hospital for further observation of her alleged eccentricities. Mrs. Hartnett insists that she is the owner of a small estate in Ireland and wishes to return there to claim her own. Her husband, Dan Hartnett, testified that she did not own anything in Ireland and that in her delusions she has threatened him with bodily injury several times in the last two years.

With no other witnesses present in the court, Mrs. Hartnett impressed the examining physicians so well that neither considered her a fit subject for commitment to the asylum for the insane. She graphically described her beautiful home by the broad expanse of the Atlantic ocean in the south of Ireland and said that she desired to return there to claim her own and live there in peace. There was no evidence to contradict her statements except that of her husband. Her appearance was so neat and her statements so direct and frank that the physicians agreed that she was sane and that her peculiarities were only due to outbursts of temper.

Mrs. Hartnett gave her age as fifty years. She is the mother of five children, two of whom are respected mechanics, one in this city and the other in Southern Arizona. Her two daughters reside with their parents in Jerome. One son is a student at the Tempe Normal School. Cross-examined, she admitted that all her children were good and kind to her and that her husband was also kind, with the exception that he prevented her from returning to her native land to claim her own. She also remembered being committed to the territorial asylum for the insane four years ago and told the court and physicians the names of the superintendent and asylum attendants, even relating what transpired at her examination when she was committed.

She says that some Mexicans residing in her neighborhood in Jerome annoy her at times, calling her bad names. She joined her husband in Jerome nine years ago, coming from her native land with her family. Her youngest child, a daughter, was born in Jerome eight years ago.

SAVOY DEVELOPING INTO A GREAT MINE

(From Sunday's Daily)

With its output of two tons of $150 ore and thirty tons of $18 ore daily, the Savoy mine in the Bradshaw mountains, is producing better now than ever in its history. There is a large tonnage of ore opened in the mine and the outlook is that the production will increase as exploitation is pushed.

The mine is opened to a depth of 800 feet and the principal work is in the lower level. Five hundred feet from the mouth of the main tunnel a shaft is sunk on the vein to a depth of 300 feet below the tunnel level, giving a depth of eight hundred feet below the apex. Drifts are run from the lower level and the great ore bodies above are now being stope. The value in the ore is principally silver.

The property is among the oldest locations in the Bradshaw mountains. It is generally known as the "Black Jack" mine, named after its former owner, E. S. Junior, who is familiarly known all over Arizona as "Black Jack." It was considered among the best prospects in the range in the early days of the Tiger, a neighboring property, the development of which is again being vigorously pushed in the lower levels, where the outlook is that it will eclipse its former record as a producer when its ore treasures are blocked out.

The Savoy is in the same mineral belt as the Gray Eagle mine, the property of the Tiger Gold Company, which is making regular bullion shipments. A gold brick weighing $600 was received at the Prescott National Bank from the Tiger Gold Company yesterday. Bullion shipments of this approximate value have been regularly received by the bank every few days from this company during the last few months. Prospectors familiar with the district assert that the Gray Eagle vein continues through the Savoy ground. Operations at the Savoy are under the direct supervision of the Cuniff brothers, Bernard Cuniff being general manager with M. G. Cuniff, superintendent. The product is packed to Crown King, from where it is shipped through this city to the El Paso smelters.

BRYAN STANDS NO CHANCE TO BE ELECTED

Arizona Admirer Of The Nebraskan Returns From Tour

(From Tuesday's Daily)

"Bryan has absolutely no chance for election to the presidency of the United States. This is the statement made yesterday by J. E. Eriksen, who arrived home Sunday night from a tour of twelve states of the union."

"It is surprising, but nevertheless true," he said, "to see the number of Taft buttons in evidence all over the east. Hardly a Bryan button can be seen. I say this with regret as I am a great admirer of the democratic candidate. In the jewelry stores, it is claimed, ten Taft buttons are sold to one Bryan one. The women are as enthusiastic for Taft as the men. They sport Taft badges and buttons everywhere. Anyone is safe in wagering his last dollar that Taft will succeed Roosevelt in the White House."

Changing the conversation to business conditions as he observed them, he declared that Arizona was the most prosperous place he had seen in his travels. "People here do not know what hard times are," he declared. "There are thousands of idle men all over the east desirous of employment, who cannot get work. Nickels and pennies are popular monies in all the great cities of the east. A man that shows a twenty dollar gold piece or bill is looked upon with amazement. 'I am perfectly satisfied to settle down and live my remaining days in Arizona. I want none of the east in mine,'" he concluded.

TUCSON RAILROAD SHOPS RUNNING FULL BLAST

Full Force, Full Pay And Full Time Again Rules

(From Tuesday's Daily)

TUCSON, Sept. 14.—The best news that has occurred in a long while in the city of Tucson is contained in chronicling the fact that the Southern Pacific shops have put their entire force back for the full day, nine hour shift, for the first time in months.

This represents immediately the increase of many dollars in the pay roll and a consequent greater volume of business in this city.

But it means in the end much more than that. It is apparent that this advancement in the working force is but a preliminary to a greater one to come. If the present force is required for nine hours this early in the fall, it will not be a matter of many weeks until more men will be needed. It is altogether probable to assume that by the middle of the fall the shops will be carrying as good a force of men as they were when the company first began to curtail their help.

It will be remembered that the first step taken was the laying off of a few men. Then all the others were cut down to an eight-hour day. Then those who stayed were cut to five days a week. Finally the shops were practically denuded of workmen.

The ascension up hill is just the same and this is the longest step that has been taken toward getting back to the big payroll which always goes a long way towards making this town prosperous.

The railroad officials, reticent as is their custom in discussing administrative policies of the road in any way, declined yesterday to say a word in regard to further increases at the shops or whether there would be any but the increase in the volume of moving freight in the near future so well submits itself to mathematical demonstration that it may be taken as a foregone conclusion.

For the first time in months the employees at the shop are getting in a fifty-four hour week and this is certain to continue throughout the winter.

OLD MARK HANNA GROUP AGAIN TO BE WORKED

Red Ridge Mining Company Secures Control Of Property

One of the newest mining companies formed for the purpose of operating a valuable group of mines near Congress is the Gold Ridge Mining and Milling Company. The group is what was known as the Mark Hanna group and was owned by Byron Smith of this place, says the Wickenburg Miner. Mr. Smith will leave in a few days to take charge of the work which will be commenced very soon.

The company is composed mainly of Winslow people. A. W. Davis is president, E. A. Wing, vice president, F. M. Ward second vice president.

Byron Smith, of this place, will be superintendent of the mine.

The reporter knows from personal observations, having visited the property several times, that the Gold Ridge people have secured some very valuable property that should, beyond peradventure, develop into a good mine.

Two of the claims lie between the Alaska mine owned by the United Gold Mines Company, and the claims owned by Ed. Zeiger, of Congress Junction. Considerable high grade ore has been shipped from the Zeiger property and also from the Alaska. The latter has a shaft down between 200 and 300 feet which exposes some very fine ore. The Alaska, Grubstake, and Zeiger property is on the same lode as the Ohio of the United Gold Mines Company on which the main workings and mill of the company is located. The Mark Hanna is a parallel claim and appears to dip at an angle that indicates its contact with the Grubstake vein at about from 250 to 300 feet in depth, calculating from the dip of each vein. The inclined shaft and other works on the Grubstake shows it to average about seven feet in thickness. The ore is a white quartz on the surface, depth shows it to be considerably colored with iron and well filled with "bug holes" in which is quite frequently found gold nuggets of considerable size. The lower levels of the United Gold Mines show high grade sulphide ore. Sulphides are showing in the Mark Hanna also. The character of the ore in general is much the same as the Congress.

A shaft sunk to a depth of three or four hundred feet should show up some good ore for the Gold Ridge Mining and Milling Company, since it may be said that it is in a practically proven belt. The men behind the enterprise are said to be among the leading business men of Winslow.

Journal-Miner for high class job work.
